

TWELVE ELECTED TO MEMBERSHIP IN THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF EDUCATION

February 6, 2013 – National Academy of Education President Dr. Susan Fuhrman has announced that twelve education leaders have been elected to membership in the National Academy of Education for their valuable contributions to educational research and policy development:

- Lindsay Chase Lansdale, Northwestern University
- Jeffrey Henig, Teacher's College, Columbia University
- Susanna Loeb, Stanford University
- Kathleen McCartney, Harvard Graduate School for Education
- Jeffrey Mirel, University of Michigan
- Anna Neumann, Teacher's College, Columbia University
- Mike Rose, UCLA Graduate School of Education and Information Studies
- Robert Rueda, University of Southern California
- Rubén Rumbaut, University of California, Irvine
- Robert Schwartz, Harvard Graduate School for Education
- Lois Weis, University of Buffalo
- Roger Weissberg, The University of Illinois at Chicago

The National Academy of Education (NAEd) advances the highest quality education research and its use in policy formation and practice. Founded in 1965, the NAEd consists of U.S. members and foreign associates who are elected on the basis of outstanding scholarship related to education.

In addition to serving on expert study panels that address pressing issues in education, members are also deeply engaged in NAEd's professional development programs such as the NAEd/Spencer Postdoctoral Fellowship Program and the NAEd/Spencer Dissertation Fellowship Program.

Nominations are submitted by individual members once a year for review and election by the entire membership. "The newly elected members are preeminent leaders in their respective areas of educational research, and they are recognized for the extraordinary influence that they have had on education in the U.S. and abroad," Fuhrman said.

##